Notification of ISA National Elections 2021
(15 September 2021)

Dear ISAians,

Greetings !

The Intensive and Critical Care Medicine (ICCM) Committee of the World Federation of Societies of Anaesthesiologists (WFSA) is conducting a survey among recently trained Anaesthesiologists.

Survey: Competencies Required by Anesthesiologists Managing Critically ill Medical and Surgical Patients In An Intensive Care Unit: A WFSA Survey

Anesthesiologists being perioperative physicians, practice CCM full time or part-time. There is considerable variation in the training curriculum of the Anesthesiologists based on the geographical region. This survey is designed to review the existing competencies for CCM in the Anesthesiology curriculum across the globe. The results of this survey will be used to identify the gaps and additional competencies required for Anesthesiologists to practice Critical Care in ICU through expert consensus, using a Delphi process.

Those who have COMPLETED ANESTHESIOLOGY TRAINING IN THE LAST THREE YEARS (between 2018-2021). The survey will take about ten minutes to complete

Hypoxemia during surgery

- Anesthesia providers strive to avoid hypoxemia because of the risk of irreversible damage to the myocardium, brain, and other end organs.
- Despite these efforts, hypoxemia continues to occur in the operating room at a surprisingly high rate.
- This may represent a serious safety concern because of its potential impact on end organ function and long-term outcome

WFSA Theme of World Anaesthesia Day

Teamwork: Stronger teams for better patient care

Anaesthesiologists are at the forefront of clinical teams that bring together individuals with different skillsets, attributes and styles. Good teamwork leads to improved patient outcomes, increased staff satisfaction and a reduced incidence of burnout.

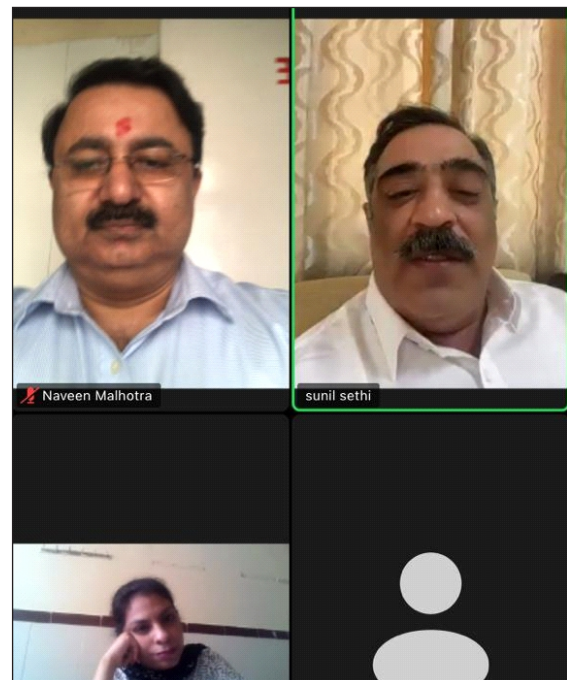

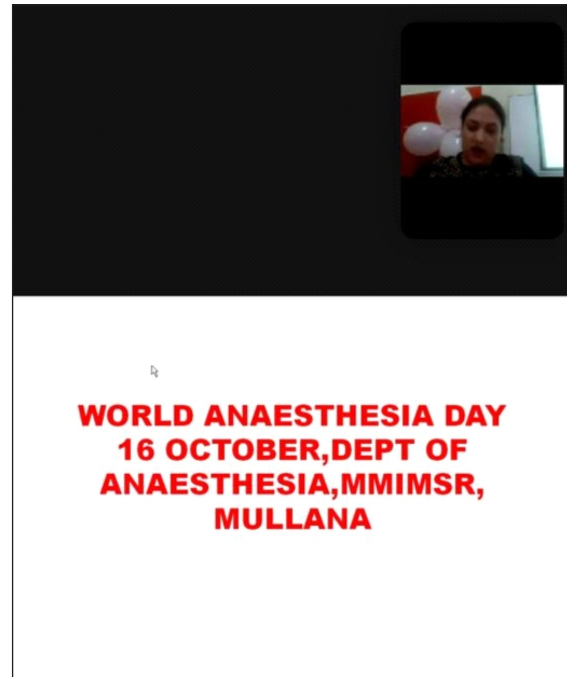

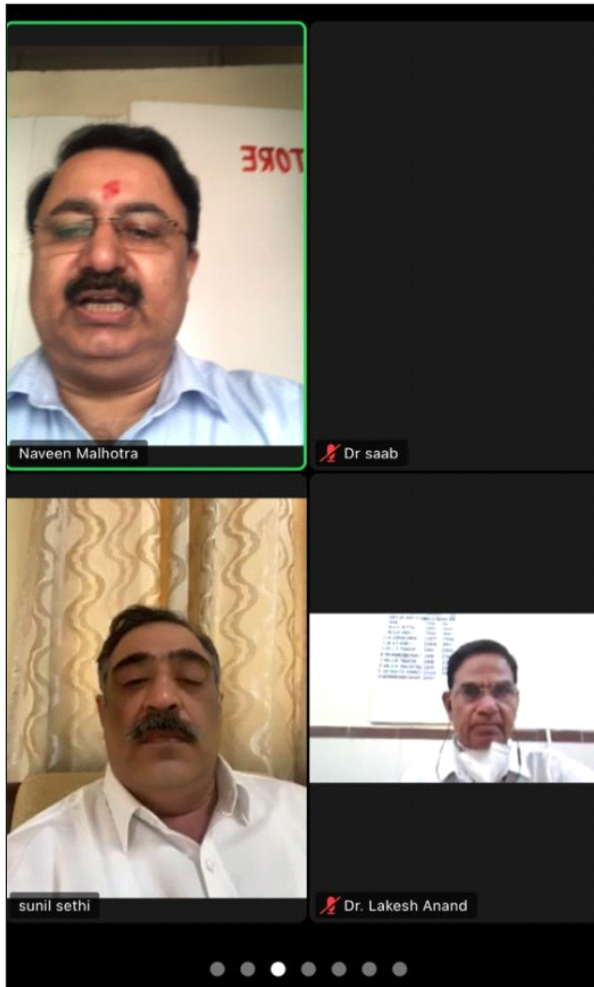

This World Anaesthesia Day celebrate the skills and attributes of those who we work alongside and rely on.

Celebrate your team on 16 October 2021.

Best wishes and warm regards,
